GOOD CREDIT

(From The Hopewell News)

Good credit is one of the most valuable assets than anyone can have. It is an outward sign of good character and completes honesty. It is a strong staff to lean on in an hour of need. It is a true reflection of your standing among friends, neighbors and those you do business with.

Credit is something that should be carefully guarded and never abused. It is often a life-saver in times of emergency. For credit is the foundation of all modern business and no one can get ahead in the world today unless they have a good credit rating.

The only way to get a good credit rating is to pay your bills promptly. Never buy more than you can pay for and always pay when you have agreed to. It does not matter whether you are a day laborer or a banker, your individual credit rating is based on the way you meet your obligations.

There is another angle to this that few people seem to think of. There are naturally times when everyone gets in a jam and cannot meet their payments or pay their bills exactly on the dot. In such cases the way to preserve your credit is to go and explain the circumstances, frankly ask for an extension of time and set the date when you can pay, as nearly as possible.

In this way, provided you do pay up just as soon as you are able you will preserve the respect of the business community and keep your credit in good standing.

It is well to remember that the best bulk of business today is done on credit. If you do not pay promptly, the dealer or merchant cannot pay promptly, or the distributor or wholesaler cannot pay promptly and pretty soon the manufacturer cannot pay promptly, so he has to curtail production. This throws people out of work and will sooner or later reflect back on your own job or business.

So your individual credit standing is important, not only to you and your family, but to the community and the nation. But most of all, For your own self interest, you should use every means to keep your credit rating good. And this simply means paying your bills promptly and meeting your obligations when they come due.

Schools To The Fore

From Tidewater Review

Much will be heard of the movement to "do something" for the schools between now and the time the legislature adjourns next February. Governor Price has given the move his blessing and we can expect many others to do likewise. Whether the plans will go through without much "cutting down" is a highly conjectural question.

Virginia has no justifiable reason for remaining near the bottom of the forty-eight States in furnishing educational opportunities for its youth. No matter by what standard our schools are measured, they fail to come up to what they should be. It is quite clear that they do not measure up to to the standard set by our highway system or many other government supported enterprises.

The three-point program of a decent minimum for teachers' salaries, free textbooks and an actuarially sound plan for retirement of teachers is not an excessive request of the school authorities. The results that would arise from meeting these minimum requirements would likely be more beneficial than even the most optimistic now vision.

Something must be done for the schools sooner or later. Why not do it now?

VIRGINIA'S SCHOOL PROBLEM

An Associated Press news story this week from Richmond read:

"State Education Lags Behind average.....,"

"Is 'educational effort' Virginia was ranked next to last, above Arkansas."

Let's talk about that for awhile.

In the value of school property, in enrollment, average attendance, length of school term, and library expenditure, Virginia has moved up in the rankings. Yet in "ability" of its public school system, the State ranks 35th in the nation.

As the problem is being discussed throughout Virginia, the solution most generally offered narrows down to "spending more money" on the school program. Some sort of a program, aimed at raising the pay of teachers and furnishing free texts books, is being hashed up, and may or may not be passed by the next legislature. Yet, we do not feel that the program "now being advanced will act as more than a temporary tonic. In Virginia government, to spend more money means to raise more money. That would mean more taxation, and there are grave reasons why the tax burden should not be increased. Virginia is luring many industries because of the favorable tax comparison it enjoys with other states. We must not stem the flood of valuable new industries to the Old Dominion, for these new industries mean JOBS for our people and are the most encouraging fact of our generation. As important as is money, there are other factors in the picture. For example, the low rank of teacher salaries in Virginia is doubtless due to low pay of the Negro teachers in rural schools. To move the average salary from $500 to $625 will not solve the problem of education in Virginia. Nor would moving it up to $1,000, much as it would be welcomed by the teachers. Nor will the giving of free textbooks solve the school problem. Fine uniforms and high plumed hats do not make an able army. Success depends rather on such words as efficiency, ordination, strategy, transport and economic background.

The solution we have in mind for the school problem may be a generation off. It will come only after a long and bitter political fight. It will be defeated in the legislature and at the polls until only its staunchest advocates will keep up the effort. It will be downed, lambasted, lauched at, and even cussed. BUT it will eventually come. It may be in five years, maybe ten, maybe even twenty, but it will come. We have no doubt of its ultimate triumph. And what is this solution? IT IS FOR THE STATE TO TAKE OVER THE SCHOOLS AS IT HAS THE ROADS!

It is our opinion that when the late Samuel Lewis Ferguson, of Appomattox, led the fight for Virginia to take over the roads from the counties, he performed one of the greatest public services of his time. Some-day another political leader will do the same thing for our school system. The state will own and operate the school buses, will rotate "resident superintendents" around the commonwealth, will supervise every detail of the program, and will save thousands of dollars through coordinated contract and practices, and will lift Virginia to the same high rank in education it now enjoys in its highway department.

A lot of water will pass under the bridge before this solution is accepted. The campaign will be long and bitter. BUT many of us will live to see it!

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating, exposure, often overtaxes kidneys. Then backache—nervous heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes scanty burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body acids. They have been in use more than half a century—are recommended and endorsed by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Strengthening Pearl Harbor

From Eastern Shore News

News from the West coast indicates that a fully balanced, fast-striking force of the United States navy will be detached from the main fleet and stationed at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

The change in tactics is not caused by any idea that the British and French fleets constitute a menace to the United States. It is merely the wise precaution of recognizing that Japan might try to take advantage of the situation in Europe to attempt something in the Pacific.

(This strengthening of our naval forces in Hawaii seems reasonable and will probably meet with the approval of all Americans except those who believe that we can stay out of war by passing resolutions and chanting, "We want peace."

Va. Public Service Co. Expands

M. J. O'Connell, president of the Virginia Public Service Company, made the following statement today:

"Subject to the approval of the State Corporation Commission, the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Alexander City Council, a new $2,000,000 steam generating station of 15,000 kilowatt capacity will be erected on a site adjoining the present Alexander generating plant of the Virginia Public Service Company.

"Papers of incorporation are to be filed this afternoon with the State Corporation Commission, to create the Virginia Public Service Generating Company, which will finance and erect the proposed new $2,000,000 plant. Directors and officers of the Virginia Public Service Company will hold similar positions in the proposed Generating Company.

"The new $2,000,000 plant to provide additional power facilities in Northern Virginia is part of a comprehensive plan to increase power facilities throughout the territory served by the Virginia Public Service Company.

Sears Roebuck Co. Ready for Television

Anticipating the advent of television, Sears, Roebuck and Co. has equipped major models of its new 1940 Silvertone radios with a revolutionary "Super-Unit" making them instantly available for television broadcasts, Mr. R. F. Duncan, Lynchburg store manager announced today.

A complete assortment of 1940 Silvertones has been received at Sears and are now on display in the radio department.

"Practical commercial television sets, or 'telecasts' as they are called, are still a number of years in the future," Mr. Duncan explained. "Experimental work conducted in New York has not been able to cast an image farther than 45 miles. Therefore, those people who are waiting for television to arrive before buying new radios will have a long wait."

"But, when television does come," said Mr. Duncan, "owners of 1940 Silvertone console radios will be able to receive' telecasts' by merely adding a converter unit to their sets, for they are equipped with a television sound outlet."
